

Costume Guide

Sea of Flames is a larp about intrigue and nobility set in the A Song of Ice & Fire universe. You play as nobles and knights from all over the kingdom of Westeros and we strongly encourage you to dress accordingly. To assist you with this task, we humbly present you this costume guide.

As a rule of thumb, all of you are from noble houses or noble lineages, this means that you are rather wealthy at least compared to the regular peasants, or at least you used to be. We're not ashamed of taking inspiration from the Game of Thrones & House of the Dragon TV-series, and neither should you be. That being said this larp is not a reenactment of these shows and therefore we do not expect you to look like any of the people in those shows.

Lastly we cannot overstate that this is a guide and we strongly encourage creative freedom, this document is for inspiration and should inspire you to make your own costume and give you a general guideline for what we expect. Now that this have been said we do have one golden rule:

- No one should doubt what house you belong to, based on your costume.

We also have some overall guidelines to help you pick out a costume:

- Your clothes should sit snug on you.
  - Generally avoid classic baggy pants and shirts (Not to say the puffed shoulders, arms or draping dresses aren't allowed.)
- Your house colors should be apparent on your costume.
  - Heraldry, such as house & personal emblems are awesome additions that add a lot of character to your costume.
- Don't be afraid to bling out your costume, or make it showy.
  - Apart from politics, you're also here to impress other lords and ladies.

Wards, Bannermen and Knights

Wards

As a ward you should dress in the same fashion as the house you are serving, but we strongly encourage you to incorporate elements from your birth house, e.g. color, emblem or traditional wear.

Bannermen

As a Bannermen, you are technically lower status than your great house, but you are still noble, in most cases. You have more free reign over colors and traits, and some Bannermen houses can be very distinct, but try to incorporate details from your great house into your costume.

Knights

At the game, there will be a tourney. If you read your character and feel they might be up for entering the Tourney, we encourage you to bring armor. You can borrow a breastplate from us, if you don't bring your own, just tell us in advance.
